OUT FOR PRACTISE EACH DAY

And They Work Out Like so Many High Bred Race Horse-Friends With Manager.

Tim Murnane, the well known baseball writer, is down at Tomasville, Ga., with the Boston Nationals and writes as follows about the team:

Here I am at dreamy old Thomasville with the Boston Nationals, where the mocking birds sing an opening chorus pines, peach blossoms and roses fills the each morning, and the oder from lofty plnes, peach blossowns and roses fills the sir.

Here the ball players work out like so many highly bred race horses, and spend the evenings on the hotel versands. Sm. King President Geo. Dovey's imported eigars. The players care to smoke each evening, after diamer. Mr. Dovey is full of new ideas on training a ball tealm. The players care to smoke each evening, after diamer. Mr. Dovey is full of new ideas on training a ball tealm. The players arise each morning at 7 o'clock, they can eat only what the trainer prescribes, and must cut out all smoking usuif evening.

Mr. Dovey is out for practise each day and works fully as hard as any man on his team. He is no mean ball piayer, and the players have realized that his advice is well worth considering. Mr. Dovey seems to be doing everything possible for the comfort of his boys, as he fondly calls his men, in most cases, this freedom with the players would result disastrously, but I am inclined to think that George ly, but I am inclined to think that George ly, but I am inclined to think that George ly, but I am inclined to think that George ly, but I am inclined to think that George ly, but I am inclined to think that George ly, but I am inclined to think that George ly, but I am inclined to think that George ly, but I am inclined to think that George lovey. Ball players can call a bluff as well as anyone and are taking the new president for what he appears on the surface, a mighty clever fellow who loves the baseball atmosphere and is honestly fond of his boys.

George Dovey has staked his little pile on making the Boston club a financial winner. He has already shown that he can make friends, and, if the old southed franchise of Boston can be made a winner. Dovey is the man I feel sure will get good work out of the material he has. He fully appreciates the power of the press, is aware of the following that writters on the game possess and is not likely to make the grievous mistakes of so many men in the past, of scrapping with for much in the councils of the great game, managed by the minor league organization.

The major leagues were in no way affected by the conditions framed up by the minors for the protection of their little organizations, and should have stood shoulder to shoulder with the great majority of leagues, who are the very life of the game, and not smile on the suggestions offered by "Tip" O'Neill. The original agreement read that leagues could draft cities of another league in a lower class by paying a small price.

Finding that the major leagues were practically tied up to their present circuits, the minor leagues thought it would be a good policy to cut off the drafting of territory until the big leagues started the move, bowing to the right of the major leagues to take territory at the close of each season. Now comes the Western league, with a bold attempt to compel the minors to force Topeka out of the Western association, using the national commission as a club to force the matter through. Is there a fair-minded baseball man who can honestly uphold such methods?

The national commission has done splendid work for the game, to which I have given them full credit, and I would delight to continue praise; but when it comes to the itnernal affairs of the national association I am very anxious to see the commission I have given them full credit, and I would delight to continue praise; but when it comes to the itnernal affairs of the national heard, which has so well managed its own affairs, and should never look for glory by questioning the rights of the national commission to handle its affairs as they see fit.

I, for one, claim that the draft law, as they see fit.

New York, March 31.—Marvin Hart, the heavyweight puglist, is another fighter who has got the mania for picking out "lemons" to beat up in a fistic battle. He has picked poor old Peter Maher for his opponent, and the pair will get together in a twenty-round bout at a show to be brought off by the Whitington Park Athletic club of Hot Springs on the night of April 9. They are to battle at catch weights for 60 per cent of the gross recipis.

The only fight that Maher has don in a long time was that with his mother-iniaw, whom he almost put out during an altercation at New Orleans a few months ago. Hart, therefore, should have no trouble in putting Peter away in a few rounds.

al commission to mande its share at they see fit.

I, for one, claim that the draft law, as it now stands, is the life blood of the minors, and the minors come pretty near being the backbone of our great sport. Like the evergreen pine tree, you will find minor leagues in every section of this great country, thriving as the result of the close connection with the national association.

the close connection with the untional association.

I know that much is left to Chairman Herrmann in the running of the national commission, and look for the able chairman to get a better line of the thirty leagues which consider the present draft aw the foundation of the minor organization. In about two weeks the regular season third. The brilliant summer-like weather brought out a record attendance, which included President Faillieres and men prominent in sport and society from all nations.

Heart Weakness

The action of the heart depends upon the heart nerves and muscles. When from any cause they become weak or exhausted, and fail to furnish sufficient power, the heart flutters, palpitates, skips beats; and in its effort to keep up its work, causes pain and distress, such as smothering spells, short breath, fainting, pain around heart, arm and shoulders. The circulation is impeded, and the entire system suffers from lack of nourishment. Dr. Miles' Heart Cure makes a heart strong and vigorous by strengthening these nerves and muscles.

"I had palpitation and pain around my heart, and the dectors said it was incurable. I don't believe it now for after taking six bottles of Dr. Miles' He. At Cure, three bottles of Dr. Miles' He. At Cure, three bottles of the Norvine and three boxes of the Nerve and Liver Pills I am entirely cured, and feel better than I have for five years, and it is all due to these remedies. I want you to know that your medicines sured me. It relieved me from the first dose, and I kept tight on till the pain in my chest was gone, and I kept on feeling better even after I quit taking it. will be on once more, and lovers of the game will be figuring on the chances of their clubs for a good position in the standing. Several teams will have new lineups, and the clever managers will work night and day looking for the weak spots in their rivals. There is a small army of once great players, just on the decline, who will take things easy at the start, more interested in their own welfare than the standings of the teams each day. If these men find they can go the clip they will work like beavers for the majority of seasoned players will smile and whisper, "Give me just one more year, and I will be easy," for ball players have grown wise and know the value of real money.

The leans of the two major leaves are

The teams of the two major leagues are now more evenly matched than ever, and the National league is fast recovering the ground lost to the American league, when the new member could go out and take the pick of the great ball playars.

out and take the pick of the great can players.

Both leagues must now build from the ranks of the minors, with a few college players thrown in. The latter are always looking for big mency with little experience to offer.

Grand Prix.

It has been announced that Walter Christie alone of Americans will compete in the Grand Prix race, and sutoenthusiasts are admiring the pluck and perserevance of perhaps the best known American amateur motorist. Few, however, know anything of the car with which he will race. Its manufacture has been kept a secret.

In an unpretentious machine shop close to the Hudson river in New York there is being built the Christie racer which will compete against the famous fiters of France, Belgium, England and Italy, Of course, it is a front drive car. No car that Christie builds could be otherwise. The details of this form of construction are already familiar through the Blue Streak and other Christie racers that have made their appearance.

already familiar through the Blue Streak and other Christie racers that have made their appearance.

The Grand Prix racer has a wheel base of 112 inches, and a track of only 53. It is expected that it will weigh when completed, only 1,789 pounds, in full running order, It will surely be the lightest car in the race, as most manufacturers of the continent have admitted that their racers will surpass the weight limit of 2,009 pounds, enforced last year, but removed for the coming Grand Prix.

The engine will be, in general, the same as those in former Christie cars, set crosswise over the front axle, and driving direct to the front wheels through universal joints.

Nothing has been said about the horse-power of the car, but the bore and stroke of the cylinders are both 7% inches. At 1,000 revolutions, this sized engine should easily furnish 120 horsepower. The valves are both overhead operated by rocker arms.

are both everhead operated by rocker arms.

Another thing of interest about the racer which will uphold American prestige is the wheels. They are all metal, with hollow steel spokes. The number of spokes has been reduced from 12 to 10. The reason for this is to increase the speed with which the Christie patent rim may be removed in ease of puncture. The rim has no felly, and when a tire is removed, all that remains is a hub and spokes. To hold the rim on, there is a lug which is botted to each spoke. Reducing the number of spokes reduces the number of spokes reduced the number of spokes reduced and naturally this saves time.

MYSTERY OF SUICIDE.

No One Knows Why Ball Player Chick

Stahl Killed Himself.

No One Rhows Why Sail Player Unick Stahl Killed Himself.

Boston, March il.—Chick Stahl, captain and former manager of the Boston American league baseball team, has left an unsolved mystery in his sudden suicide. Today his stricken wife is speeding toward the place where his body is lying with this cry on her lips: "I could have saved him if I had been there."

One question is on the tongue of the entire baseball world coday: "Why did Stahl take his own lite?"

In the opinion of many of those closest to the dead hall player something more than worry over baseball must have driven him to his death.

"If I had gone with him," said Mrs. Stahl. "this would never have happened. Oh, Chick. Chick. You wanted me to go with you," she cried despairingly, "but I thought it would be better for me to stay here in Boston and wait for you. If I had only been with you those nights when you were toasing about siceplessiy with wide open cyes.

"Then you would have had somebody to confide in. Oh, Chick, you worried over little things—things nobody else would have bothered shout. It is all my fault—for some time Stahl had been brooding over some seere; trouble, declare his friends, sad now they ask: "What was 137"

He had never, so far as is known, shown any signs of insanity. He had reached

He had never, so far as is known, shown any signs of insanity. He had reached the height of baseball fame, his home life was apparently happy, but these facts only deepen the mystery of the tragedy. There is a belief that Stah had long since dwelt on the problem of cutting short his life.

Plac, why did he continually talk about it to be members of the beam. And the question is unasuwered.

(Inly at Louisville Stahl said to Dineen one morning while rubbing his face with a solution of carboile acid, "I wonder if this stuff would kill a man?"

"Would it?" responded Dineen: "why a speenful of it would kill a dozen men."

"Then I have a good mind to take a good drink of it," continued Stahl.

Dineen looked at him and said: "How would your mother or your wife like that kind of news?"

Chick shook his head and answered: "That's so, Bill; it would kill my mother."

"That's so, Bill; it would kill my mother."

Although not a man who often talked religion, Stahl brought up the subject again and again in Little Rock and went to holy communion while there.

Stahl's friends admit that it was only natural that a man carrying such a responsibility would have worried some, but Stahl was too sensitive and level headed, they said, to let that drive him to death.

Moreover, he had on Monday last been ed, they said, to let that drive him to death.

Moreover, he had on Monday last been relieved of the greater part of his responsibility and everything seemed to be running along smoothly.

The members of the Boston team were with him to a man. The owner of the club had implicit raith in him and his ability to handle a great hall team. He had a high salary, was lately wed to a bright Boston girl and apparently was at peace with all the world.

The fact that Stahl had ordered his fellow players to practise, had donned his own uniform and apparently fully intended to join them up to the very moment he put the bottle of deadly acid to his lips only deepens the mystery.

"What thought came into his mind that finally overcame his resistance to the impulse that had seemingly long been calling to him to end his life?" is the question his friends are asking today.

And no one can answer.

TOWARDS UNCLE SAM

Washington, March 31.—Chile's foilure to send a minister to Washington to replace Walker Martinez, who did not return home after the Pan-American conference at Rio Janiero last summer, has caused much comment. The neglect of the Chilean congress to appropriate sufficient money to maintain the legation has been given as a reason for leaving the American mission in charge of Alberto Yoacham, secretary of the legation, But it has just become known that the real cause was hidden deep in Letan American politics.

cause was hidden deep in Letin American politics.

Chile decided it would be a good idea to have an ambassador in Washington and steps were taken to discover what the United States thought of the proposed elevation of the Chilean representative to Washington.

The suggestion that the Chilean envoy might be raised to ambassadorial fank set all Latin America on edge and a general movement was instituted by the southern republics to head off such a movement. Arrentina, being unfriendly to Chile, was especially opposed to the plan, as Brazil and Chile are always rated as allies and Argentina did not want her two strongest rivals to outstrip her in American representation.

It has not been the policy of the state department to send ambassadors to any country which cannot be ranked as a world power, and when the hostility of the rest of South America to such a change became known the United States decided that the question had better not be agitated further at this time.
